NEWS

FROM LEYTONSTONE TO LAGOS

Damon in 2014 visiting the house in Leytonstone where he grew up

Damon Albarn is returning to Waltham Forest as part of Africa Express: The Circus. The musical collective of African and Western artists, co-founded by Damon, is playing in Leytonstone on Friday 29 March as part of Waltham Forest's year as the Mayor's first ever London Borough of Culture. The show has special significance as it sees Damon returning to the area where he lived as a boy.

From Liverpool to Lagos, the Blur frontman has travelled the globe with Africa Express, an acclaimed group of African and Western artists, promoting unity and collaboration through music across borders, genres and generations. Now, he's coming home.

Damon lived with his family on Fillebrook Road in Leytonstone and attended George Tomlinson school, before moving to Essex when he was nine.

Damon has spoken warmly of his time in the borough and how living in such a diverse area influenced his music, first with Blur, and then through collaborations with other artists, including Gorillaz and Africa Express.

His first solo album, 2014's

Everyday Robots, featured the song Hollow Ponds, an homage to the area in Leytonstone he visited as a child.

Now, he and Africa Express are bringing an exciting collective of musicians from around the world – including, of course, Waltham Forest – together for Africa Express: The Circus. The five-hour headline show in the Big Tent on Wanstead Flats is one of the highlights of London Borough of Culture 2019.

Tickets went on sale last week, with local residents offered a 72-hour priority booking period before they were made available to people outside the borough.

Get set for Spring Clean 2019!

Pupils from Davis Lane Primary school, Leytonstone, get involved in 2017's Spring Clean

Some of the rubbish collected in previous years

The annual big bulb giveaway helps to brighten up the borough

The borough's annual Spring Clean will be taking place this year between 5-7 April and we invite all community groups, residents associations, parks groups, schools and other interested parties to take part.

It's a great way to meet your neighbours as well as helping to brighten up the borough.

Many residents also get involved in the Council's annual big bulb giveaway and we would love to see images of all your new displays when they appear.

Planting flowers, fruit, vegetables and trees not only helps make Waltham Forest look good but it also encourages bees and pollinating insects.

Last year, 94 groups were involved in the bulb giveaway, including 45 residential groups, 28 schools, and 10 Friends of Parks groups.

Cllr Clyde Loakes, Deputy Leader and Cabinet member for the Environment said: "The annual Spring Clean always captures the imagination of residents around the borough. Along with the big bulb giveaway, it's a great chance for communities to come together and get involved."

The Council's Neighbourhoods teams have again secured tons of recycled compost ready to give away for this year's planting projects. We'll be reporting where and when to get hold of it in a later issue of Waltham Forest News.

The Council has implemented the biggest tree-planting exercise in its history, increasing the number of trees in the borough by 12% since 2013, to over 50,000.

From the Leader

Cllr Clare Coghill

Having just one person without a roof over their head in Waltham Forest is one too many. But I was heartened to hear that the number of people sleeping rough in the borough has fallen substantially in the last year.

According to the latest government figures, there were 13% more rough sleepers in London as a whole during 2018. But here in Waltham Forest, we saw a 50% drop, from 44 to 22.

The Council has been working with the homeless charity St Mungo's and the YMCA to help people living on the streets find safe and secure accommodation. We are also ensuring that funding is available to assist people in emergency or short term accommodation to find a more stable home.

Of course, there is much more to do. Government cuts, coupled with changes to benefits, have made the situation worse, but as a council we are doing what we can with the money we have to ensure people don't sleep on the streets of Waltham Forest.

We are also trying to support those people struggling with the rising cost of heating their homes. That's why we are partnering with local charity the HEET Project to help residents struggling with fuel bills this winter.

The scheme will support up to 200 households who are experiencing fuel poverty by funding gas central heating systems for residents who only have access to electric heating or gas fires, as well as other measures to offer help to those who need it (details on how to apply on Page 3).

Finally, I am so excited that Damon Albarn is coming back to Waltham Forest for London Borough of Culture 2019. Africa Express: The Circus is set to be one of the highlights of the year and it's fitting that the event takes place in Leytonstone, where Damon lived as child.

Damon's journey from George Tomlinson schoolboy to respected and successful international musician is an inspiration. It shows the power of culture to make a difference in people's lives – one of the reasons why we are proud to be the Mayor's very first London Borough of Culture.

Help heating homes this winter

The cold weather looks beautiful but it can cause hardship for some residents

Residents who are struggling to heat their homes this winter can get help from Waltham Forest Council and local charity The HEET Project, who have been awarded £500,000 to tackle fuel poverty as the temperature starts to drop.

The award, from the £150m National Grid Warm Homes Fund, will support up to 200 households who are experiencing fuel poverty. It will fund first time gas central heating systems for residents who currently use electric heating or gas fires. The scheme can also access other funds to allow a free gas connection to their property.

As part of the project, residents will also be able to benefit from energy efficiency measures, including loft and cavity wall insulation, free home energy checks, and practical advice on how to stay warm and save money on heating over the winter.

"It is a tragedy that in modern-day Britain, people are having to choose between heating and eating."

Cllr Louise Mitchell, Cabinet Member for Housing, said: "When people have a safe, decent roof over their head and a warm house in which to live, they have the confidence and support they need to succeed and make the most of their life chances.

"We are determined to work to help those who may be struggling in the face of ever-rising fuel bills. It is a tragedy that in modern-day Britain, people are having to choose between heating and eating."

Residents in receipt of certain benefits or who meet the low income threshold will be eligible for the project. The funding is available to owner occupiers and social and private tenants with the agreement of their landlord.

Tom Ruxton, of the HEET Project, said: "A free gas connection and installation of an efficient gas central heating system can halve a household's heating bill. Adequate warmth is essential to good health and can also help to reduce problems of condensation and mould growth in your home."

If you think you may benefit from advice, or qualify for support installing a new gas heating system, please contact The HEET Project on 020 8520 1900 for more information and to register your interest.

What is fuel poverty?

A 2018 government report found that nearly one-in-10 households in the UK were experiencing fuel poverty. But what does this actually mean?

A household can be described as experiencing fuel poverty if their current heating costs are more than the UK average and their income falls below the poverty line. Suggested temperatures are around 21°C in a living room, and 18°C in other occupied rooms. It also takes into account the costs of hot water, lighting, and appliances.

359 genuinely affordable homes approved for Blackhorse Yard

Blackhorse Yard will provide affordable homes for local people

Waltham Forest Council's Planning Committee has approved plans by Catalyst and Swan Housing Association to build a new mixed use development at the former Webbs Industrial Estate on Blackhorse Lane. It includes 100% genuinely affordable homes as well as studio and retail space.

Councillor Simon Miller, Cabinet Member for Economic Growth and High Streets, said: "It is excellent news that this scheme has been approved. The 359 much needed, genuinely affordable homes, available at prices that are accessible to local people on local incomes, is an important part of our commitment to provide a decent roof over all our residents' heads.

"The provision of studio and retail space in the development means that businesses will also have space to launch and grow, while the new trees, green space and the opening up of Higham Brook provide attractive open space for residents to enjoy."

Designed by award winning architect CF Moller, the plans will transform the site. Alongside 359 affordable homes for shared ownership, there will be a creative hub for artisans and artists' studios, a new green pedestrian link between Blackhorse Lane and Sutherland Road and nearly 3,000 sq metres of new commercial space in the heart of the Blackhorse Lane area.

The project will also provide new public spaces with a play area and landscaping, creating an attractive development that complements other buildings on Sutherland Road.

A stream that has been hidden for many years will be opened up

More than 100 new trees will be planted and there will be opportunities for a range of community facilities on-site. A new pedestrian crossing and cycle lane will be created along Blackhorse Lane.

In addition, the Higham Brook, a stream that has been hidden for many years, will be opened up.

Formerly the site of a glass lampshade and bulb factory, the site has been derelict for seven years. In July 2016, the Mayor of London, Sadiq Khan, instructed the Greater London Authority (GLA) to purchase it with the intention of finding a development partner to build more new and genuinely affordable homes for Londoners.

It is the first time any Mayor of London has bought and then sold land to build an entirely affordable development and is part of the on-going partnership work the Council and the GLA are doing delivering the Blackhorse Lane Housing Zone initiative.

Catalyst and Swan have already received significant interest from local businesses wanting to move into the available retail units, the creative hub and artists' studios, all of which will help to complement Waltham Forest's status as the Mayor's first London Borough of Culture.

What do the figures mean?

Independent research has found the average salary in Waltham Forest is £27,000. (Source: Median annual income (gross) in Waltham Forest, Office for National Statistics, 2017.)

Under current conditions, household income would need to total £52,000 to buy a flat with a monthly charge of £1,250. That figure includes mortgage payment on 25 per cent shared ownership, rent and service charges for the flat, based on current prices.

Conditions for the Blackhorse Lane development are set by the Mayor of London.

New free gallery space for local artists

Liam O'Sullivan from UK Power Networks joins Invisible Numbers' Hannah Ford at the gallery opening

A new window gallery to display the work of local artists has opened thanks to a partnership between Waltham Forest Council, UK Power Networks and Invisible Numbers, a community based artists' organisation.

UK Power Networks has a substation behind the shop at 1B Coppermill Lane, Walthamstow, which is accessed through the shop. The substation was recently upgraded to meet demand from local residents and businesses and the council and local community worked with UK Power Networks to make the shop window and display areas available free of charge as a window gallery to showcase work from local artists.

The shop front was also replaced to improve its appearance and to complement the recent shop front improvements completed through the St James Heritage Lottery Fund project.

Performing the official opening, Cllr Clare Coghill, Leader of Waltham Forest Council, said: "It is opportunities such as this where we can celebrate the creative talent of local residents that are the heart of our work as the first London Borough of Culture.

"We are grateful to UK Power Networks for giving us this chance to provide a space for many talented and creative people in our community to showcase their work to the hundreds of people who walk past here every day."

Hannah Ford, from Invisible Numbers, said: "Our aim is to bring the community together to provide a platform for local, London and national artists.

"From the beginning, we have been involved with the Council by helping prepare the brief for the work and we are delighted the gallery is now open as it will be a great place to showcase the work of artists for local people to enjoy."

Score draws in local residents

Residents talking to the project team

There was a great turn-out for the recent public consultation event at Leyton's Score Centre.

Waltham Forest Council and Taylor Wimpey are working together to redevelop the centre to provide a mixed use development that will make a key contribution towards the new homes planned for the Borough and offer facilities for the whole community.

Fifty per cent of the homes on this site – more than 300 – will be affordable, with many of those being family homes with three or more bedrooms. Council homes for rent will be included among the affordable homes to help reduce our housing waiting list.

The scheme will also provide a modern sports, leisure and community centre, an attractive public square with shops and cafes, a new health hub and a variety of community facilities, including a pre-school nursery.

The eight-hour long drop in session held on Monday 4 February saw local people call in to see the proposals from Taylor Wimpey and talk to the project team.

The feedback from residents was very useful and will help influence the development as it progresses through the design stage.

Representatives from local

Cllr Simon Miller, Cabinet Member for Economic Growth and High Streets, talks to Taylor Wimpey representatives about the scheme businesses and community organisations, including Leyton Orient FC, Nappy Gang pre-school nursery and Waltham Forest Civic Society, also came along to see the displays and ask questions about the scheme.

If you weren't able to call in during the event you can still let us know your views.

Details of the proposals and an online response form are available on the website.

Your comments must reach us by Friday 29 March 2019.

In brief

Consultation opens on private renting

Waltham Forest Council's licensing scheme for private rented sector properties in the borough is designed to support good landlords who provide a decent home for residents and their families, while helping identify rogue landlords so action can be taken against them.

The current scheme runs out in March 2020 and the Council is now consulting on schemes to take effect from April of that year.

Meetings have been set up for landlords and residents, including private sector tenants, to get their views on the proposals or you can respond online.

Meet a Legend of the Forest: Kieran

Legend of the Forest: Kieran

Kieran, 22, from Leytonstone, talks to us about his experiences volunteering at Welcome to the Forest and what it's like being part of London Borough of Culture 2019.

Why did you sign up to be a Legend of the Forest?

I've done some volunteering previously and found it really fulfilling and a great way to meet people from different communities. My friends and family always say how good I am at giving directions and communicating with people, so I thought I would fit the role of a Legend of the Forest Wayfinder as I could share my local knowledge with those who have never visited the borough before.

What's the best thing about being a volunteer?

There are so many amazing things about being a volunteer, from interacting with my fellow Legends, who are all so friendly, to getting to wave the blue foam fingers. My favourite thing to see was the wonder and excitement on everyone's faces whether they were in Nest – the epic lighting installation in Lloyd Park – or watching the visual shows on the Town Hall building. These moments were the ones that really brought everyone together to celebrate the start of the London Borough of Culture.

What advice would you give anyone thinking about becoming a Legend?

Being a Legend truly is awesome! With events across the borough throughout the year, there is no better time to become a Legend and support spectacular events that are happening right on our doorstep.

The experience of being a Legend is so rewarding. There are loads of different opportunities available, some are behind the scenes, other roles are public-facing, so you really can choose a role that fits you.

Nearly 800 residents have already volunteered – thank you!

Fighter's Libby Liburd. Photo: David Levene

The Fighter gets ready to hit Waltham Forest

In recent issues of Waltham Forest News, we've been taking a closer look at the 12 projects to be awarded Make it Happen funding as part of London Borough of Culture 2019's Fellowship Funding programme. Selected projects cover a range of ideas, themes and creative approaches. This week we shine the spotlight on artist, actor and one time amateur boxer Libby Liburd and her project Fighter. We spoke to Libby about her project and why it is important it is happening now.

Fighter, which premieres at Stratford Circus Arts Centre at the end of April, is a show about women boxers based on personal experience.

Libby used to box and has three fights under her belt. Fighter is inspired by the pioneering female boxers that, she says, "fought for their right to fight."

The project includes exciting and unique workshops, "that give participants opportunities to learn theatre techniques, write their own scripts, meet a female boxer and take part in a boxing class."

Don't worry, no boxing experience is required to take part. Libby has designed workshops and participatory events that will explore the themes of the show further.

Libby's work has been described as "Funny, frank and authentic," and she has developed a unique voice, creating socially vigorous work that questions stereotypes and empowers women.

Fighter will coincide with International Women's Day on 8 March.

Libby says: "As a traditionally male dominated sport, I feel it is important to celebrate and elevate the achievements of women in boxing and International Women's Day seemed like the perfect opportunity to do this."

Fighter will celebrate the women that went before Libby. She will also be hosting school workshops in the run up to the show, so it's also set to inspire a new generation of women.

Number of rough sleepers halved in Waltham Forest

Cllr Clare Coghill, Leader of the Council, and guests at the roundtable to discuss homelessness

The number of rough sleepers in London has increased by 13% in the last year, according to the latest Government figures. But in Waltham Forest, the number of rough sleepers has halved over the same period.

Each year in October or November, local authorities are asked to carry out a count of rough sleepers on a single night. This snapshot is then used to compile an estimate of the number of rough sleepers on any given night.

In 2018, 1,283 people were found sleeping rough in London, up from 1,137 the year before. However, in Waltham Forest the figure fell from 44 people in 2017, to 22 in 2018.

There has been a significant increase in the number of people sleeping rough in England since 2010, and last year the Council secured funding to take part in the government's Rough Sleepers Initiative. This funding has allowed the council to develop a multi-agency programme to help support people sleeping rough and find them suitable accommodation.

Homeless charity St Mungo's has been commissioned to set up a street outreach team to find and talk to individuals found sleeping rough in the borough. Beds are provided at the YMCA to provide short-term accommodation. Funding is also available for individuals to help secure housing for them to move onto, such as deposits for private rented accommodation. So far, two people have moved onto permanent housing as a result of this programme.

"One person sleeping out on the streets is one too many, but I am pleased that we have seen a reduction in rough sleeping in Waltham Forest over the last year."

Leader of the Council, Cllr Clare Coghill convened a roundtable in December, bringing together a number of agencies who support rough sleepers in Waltham Forest, to identify what further action can be taken.

Cllr Coghill said: "One person sleeping out on the streets is one too many, but I am pleased that we have seen a reduction in rough sleeping in Waltham Forest over the last year. This shows that our interventions are working, and I'm hugely appreciative of the excellent work of our partners in this area. The rise in homelessness is a national crisis and much more needs to be done to end rough sleeping."

Cllr Louise Mitchell, Cabinet Member for Housing, who has overseen the development of the programme to tackle rough sleeping said: "If you are concerned about someone you think is sleeping rough please use the Tell Streetlink app, or visit their website to make a referral."

"It's the only place that would take Juke"

YMCA Walthamstow's Rough Sleeper Project provides short-term accommodation for three months to help rough sleepers get back on their feet. What makes the project special is that not only humans, but dogs are welcome too.

The project is run with support from Waltham Forest Council, funded through the Government's new Rough Sleeper Initiative.

At YMCA Walthamstow, there are 15 rooms for rough sleepers – and their canine companions.

Heather Barrow, Area Housing Manager at YMCA, said: "Our great now. I've had him 12 years and I wouldn't give him up for nobody.

"I was living in a tent and people would kick it down and rip it up."

"This place here at YMCA is the first place we've stayed in a long time. It's the only place that would take Juke. It's amazing. Juke has seen a street vet, as he's getting old, with arthritis and a cyst. I don't want him to have the cyst removed, though, in case he doesn't wake up again. It doesn't bother him.

"I've been living on the street for the last two-and-a-half years, locally around here in Walthamstow. People know Juke, everyone knows him. Being here at YMCA, he loves it – he doesn't want to come outside sometimes.

"I'm living here with my partner Kevin, and

Juke has been Caroline's companion for 12 years

bedsits are dog friendly and the Dog's Trust has kindly partnered with us to provide leads, dog bowls beds and toys, to ensure the dogs have what they need while they are with us. We have also registered with the Hope Project, the Dogs' Trust's veterinary entitlement card scheme. This scheme funds veterinary treatment for dogs whose owners are homeless or in housing crisis."

Caroline, 50, is living in the Rough Sleeper Project with her partner Kevin, 40 and their dog Juke.

"I got Juke when he was two years old. He was vicious and difficult to handle because someone had tried to get him ready as a fighting dog. I've put a lot of work in with him and he's we have a room each. It's brilliant – and it's really helped me get back on my feet. I've now got a doctor to help me with my deep vein thrombosis. I've also got depression and I'm on antidepressants. But I feel completely different now, it's a lot better. I was drinking a lot, and I've cut down on that. It's just so nice having somewhere you can stay.

"Before I was rough sleeping, I was living in accommodation with a partner, but we split up and I got evicted, which is why I ended up homeless. I was living in a tent and people would kick it down and rip it up. People just don't think when they do things.

"Hopefully I'll get somewhere to live soon and me, Kevin and Juke can move on."

Walk this way

Pupils from Lime Academy Larkwood show off their pedometers

To coincide with Waltham Forest's year as the first Mayor's London Borough of Culture, more than 6,000 pupils have been given digital pedometers to encourage them to explore some of the cultural and sporting opportunities in the area on foot.

By supporting people to walk more, especially for small local journeys such as walking to school, it can encourage residents to leave the car behind, improving air quality for everyone.

The silicone wristbands display the distance the children travel, their steps and how many calories have been burned.

"We hope that our children will spend even more time getting out and about in our borough and enjoying the opportunities we have to be active."

There are prizes on offer for schools that see their pupils racking up the most steps to help increase activity or improve air quality at the school.

Almost 40 per cent of Year 6 pupils in Waltham Forest are either overweight or obese. It's thought that the majority of children do not achieve the daily recommended 60 minutes of physical activity a day. This would help to maintain good general health as well as support children to develop stronger bones and muscles and support positive mental health.

Cllr Clyde Loakes, Deputy Leader and Cabinet Member for the Environment, said: "We do a lot of work with our schools to encourage children to be more active during the school run. With this walking challenge we hope that our children will spend even more time getting out and about in our borough and enjoying the opportunities we have to be active.

"We want our children to be happy and healthy and getting more exercise will help support both these aims, as well as reduce the amount of air pollution in Waltham Forest."

Studies have shown that the Enjoy Waltham Forest programme has led to a 12 per cent increase in walking and 18 per cent in cycling among residents.

Friendship, fresh air and finding new skills at the Wetlands

Mindfulness to aid mental health at Walthamstow Wetlands

Local residents have been attending a series of arts and crafts workshops at Walthamstow Wetlands for people living with mental health challenges, including depression and anxiety.

The workshops have given local residents an opportunity to access the great outdoors at London's largest urban wetlands, and connect with others through the shared experience of learning and participating in the events. The sessions have provided the time and space to learn a new craft, experiment with new techniques and talk to others.

"I feel motivated, confident and inspired."

So far, over 30 residents who've experienced low mood, depression, anxiety or loneliness, have learnt a new skill, delivered by tutors from the Adult Learning Service. One resident who attended a workshop said: "I didn't want to come out of the house. I was withdrawn. I had no hope. "[Now] I feel motivated, confident and inspired and I feel rewarded and honoured. I'm happy to share my experience with others in what I have achieved." The sessions are a partnership between Walthamstow Wetlands, the Waltham Forest Social Prescribing team and the Waltham Forest Adult Learning Service (WFALS), along with local GP surgeries and medical centres. The Council's Social Prescribing service works with residents to help them become healthier, happier and connected to their local community.

The courses provide the time and space to learn a new craft

This includes encouraging them to socialise, such as by joining an art class or gardening group, or volunteering locally. The service also links residents to further training and a career advice service. A number have progressed onto a range of courses within the Waltham Forest Adult Learning Service, including millinery, English for speakers of other languages (ESOL) and gardening. Two learners have participated in the Annual Craft fair at the Town Hall, selling a variety of goods they created.

In brief

Time to change how we think about mental health

Waltham Forest council has signed the Time to Change Employers' Pledge, a pledge to take action to support mental wellbeing in the workplace.

The council has committed to encourage more open conversations about mental health and wellbeing, review organisational policies, and deliver mental health-related training to staff and managers. The pledge was signed on Time to Talk Day, 7 February, which saw a number of events around the borough to promote improved mental health, including a photography exhibition at One Hoe Street.

Helping children make healthy choices

Ninety teachers from 28 primary schools in Waltham Forest have taken part in a new training project that sees the Council working with children's charity Barnardo's.

LifeSkills is an early intervention programme for 8 to 14-year-olds. It's designed to encourage children and young people to make healthy choices and improve resilience through the development of emotional literacy, critical thinking and the ability to cope with stress.

The scheme is a partnership between Barnardo's and Waltham

Forest Council and is part of our Life Chances programme, which works closely with young people, parents and schools to support children and help them succeed in life.

Alex Bedwell, Assistant Head Teacher at Longshaw Primary Academy in Chingford, said: "With mental health being a very current issue, LifeSkills is an extremely beneficial programme that can help us give better guidance to our pupils, teaching them how to verbalise their thoughts and feelings, and giving them the skills to cope with the issues that they may face."

"I particularly like the parent letters, which include parents and carers in their children's education, opening up the conversation at home and in the community they live in."

The LifeSkills curriculum changes children's behaviour by challenging attitudes and equipping the children with the skills to encourage a resilient child. Each pupil will receive a copy of their own workbook called LifeSkills Magazine, full of activities and exercises that reinforce what they've learnt in class. Parents and carers will be sent letters so that they are aware of what children are learning in the classroom.

Charlotte Badran, Year 4 teacher at Thomas Gamuel Primary School in Walthamstow, said: "There's a great student involvement, which I believe is the best way to engage children and will have a beneficial effect on their learning. I particularly like the parent letters, which include parents and carers in their children's education, opening up the conversation at home and in the community they live in."

The training was introduced to Year 4 teachers from schools across the borough, with the intention of implementing the programme in the school curriculum for next term.

Cllr Grace Williams, Cabinet Member for Children, Young People and Families, said: "Working with a charity like Barnardo's on this valuable programme allows us to help our children acquire the skills and knowledge they need to make the most of their life chances.

"The LifeSkills programme will help young people build resilience and raise their self-esteem, giving them the confidence they need to talk openly about the issues that they might be facing at school, at home, or in the community.

"Building youth resilience is a key part of Waltham Forest Council's substantial Life Chances programme. We are working with our schools, the youth voluntary sector and the community to create an environment where children and young people can thrive".

Chingford head bids goodbye with balloons

Pupils at Chase Lane Primary School in York Road, Chingford, have bid a sad goodbye to long-serving headmistress, Carolyn Houstoun.

Miss Houston retired at half-term after 30 years of service. Deputy head teacher, Colin Jeffrey, takes over at the school in York Road.

Carolyn's last week saw a celebration of her time at the school, including a special assembly, sing-song in the Nursery and the launch of 700 bio-degradable balloons.

She said: "I have had 30 amazing years at Chase Lane and I cannot believe where the time has gone.

"I have thoroughly enjoyed my tenure at Chase Lane and have felt well supported by parents, staff and Governors. The children are a real joy and it has been an honour and privilege to serve such a diverse and varied community. I will be taking away with me many, many happy memories. Just to mention a few: watching hundreds of children flourish over their primary schooling, the Friends of Chase Lane (PTA) balloon race, visiting Downing Street and meeting David Cameron with 25 Year 5 children, Early Years picnics, Year 6 residential trips; the enthusiasm and joy of the Year 6

30 years of service: Carolyn Houston children at their residential trip, witnessing many sporting teams excel, witnessing lots of children learn to read to a very high level, the visits from David Beckham and, of course, working with so many lovely families."

Carolyn now plans to travel and enjoy more trips to the theatre.

All aboard!
